

- 1) • E-commerce involves the buying, selling of goods or services via internet, including the necessary transfer of data and funds.
- Major business models include B2B for inter-company trades, B2C for direct retail, C2C for consumer exchanges, and C2B for freelance services.
 - These models generate employment by creating demand for roles in logistics, digital marketing, and customer support.
 - Self employment opportunities arise as individuals can easily launch businesses ~~and~~ or offer services globally.
 - The ability to reach international markets helps small ventures scale up, further driving job creation and entrepreneurship.
- 2) • An ERP system is a software suite that integrates core business processes, finance and HR, into a single unified platform.
- The architecture ~~is~~ typically ~~const~~ consists of three layers, including a presentation interface, an application processing layer, and a centralized database.
 - Integration improves efficiency by ensuring data flows seamlessly between departments, reducing redundancy and manual errors.
 - This creates ~~career~~ career opportunity for IT professionals who are needed to design, implement, and maintain complex ERP infrastructures.

3) * Finance modules handle accounting and support financial analyst jobs.

* HR modules manage payroll and assist HR professionals.

* Supply chain tools track stock for logistic managers

* CRM systems organize client info for sales teams

* Knowing these tools prepares students for corporate work.

4) * Online payments let sellers accept money globally.

* Digital marketing helps businesses reach customers cheaply.

* E-marketplaces let people sell without building websites.

* These tools reduce cost to start a business.

* They allow entrepreneurs to work for themselves only.

5) * Integration links online stores with back-end ERP software.

* This syncs inventory and sales data automatically.

* Automation ~~apps~~ improves efficiency and helps businesses grow.

* Connecting these systems creates jobs for IT devs.

* Business expansion creates more management roles.